SPEAKS TO STUDENTS

Baccalaureate Sermon By Bishop Funsten of Boise.

WAS AN ABLE ADDRESS

ADVICE TO GRADUATES OF ROW-LAND HALL.

Interesting Ceremonies Held Yesterday at St. Mark's Cathedral-Celebration by Episcopals of Whitsunday-Gathering of Sunday Schools at St. Paul's.

a day celebrated with special services all over the world; the anniversary of the coming of the Holy Spirit to the earth; the real anniversary of the foundation of the church among men. In addition to the church among men. In addition to this it was the opening of graduating week for Rowland Hall, and as a result there were in the city a number of visiting clergymen from surrounding cities, and the services were of unusual interest. Chief interest centered in the programme at St. Mark sweathedral, because the Rt. Rev. Bishop Funston of Boise delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of Rowland Hali. St. Mark's was crowded on this occasion. All the students of the school were at the service, and presented a most charming service, and presented a most charming picture with their bright young faces and pretty summer dresses. There were no special decorations for the occasion, but on all sides there was a wealth of flowers that added much to the beauty of the scene.

Prominent Divines Present.

At the opening of the services the students filed into the church in a body; they were followed by the choir singing the Processional hymn, and the choir in turn was followed by the Rev. Bishop Funston, the Rev. Bishop Leonard, the Punston, the Rev. Bishop beonard, the Rev. Hyrum Bullis of Glenwood Springs, Achdeacon Ostensen of Grand Junction, the Rev. D. Bullis of Grand Junction, the Rev. D. Douglass Wallace of St. Mark's hospital, the Rev. D. W. Galway and the Rev. Dean Eddie of St. Mark's. All of these divines took part in the services which were rendered all the more impressive because of the beautiful communion service. The only address of the day was the baccalaureate sermon by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Funston.

Bishop Funston took for his text the fourth verse of the twenty-first psalm—"He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even length of days forever and ever." The discourse was a most thoughtful and able one; the central idea was the anniversay—the coming of the Holy Spirit into the lives of men. In part the bishop spoke as follows:

"Speaking of the petition of the psalm, life's cry for life has gone up from the hills of Judea, the academies of Greece, the streets of Rome, the valleys of the Nile and the Euphrates. All' through the ages men have yearned for a deeper, fuller, more complete life. The text suggests the natural desire that man has for life and God's provision for that desire.

for life and God's provision for that desire.

"Today we are celebrating the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles. The coming of the Holy Spirit marked a new era in the history of the world, as God's enswer to man's prayer for life. Christianity is but another name for what we call civilization. The whole tendency of Christian education and the development of civilization under the influence of Christ is to deepen life, to broaden it and to lengthen it. No one can estimate the work done by Christian schools like Rowland Hall in adding influence and value to the lives of those who come under their teaching. All such training finds its true efficacy in leading the young to Christ and in bringing their lives under the influence of the Holy Spirit."

Advice to Graduates.

Advice to Graduates.

Bishop Funston closed his able address with some wholesome advice to the graduating class, laying special stress upon the increased responsibilities that were laid upon them as a result of their better education. Of him to whom much is expected in return, and the duty laid upon the young people by their higher and better education was to so conduct their lives that the lives of others will be bettered by their example, Education means more life, greater opportunities for doing the good that is to be done in the world and if it does not lead to this it has been wasted.

Sunday School Rally.

Sunday School Rally.

There was an interesting rally of the Episcopal Sunday schools of the city at St. Mark's yesterday afternoon in honor of the visiting clergymen. It was the intention to have all the local Sunday schools represented, but owing to the shortness of the time it was impossible to have some of them present. St. Mark's, St. Paul's, St. John's and Mill Creek were represented by good delegations, the latter coming in in a large wagon drawn by four horses. St. Feter's, St. Andrew's and Calvary were missing.

The programme included some very good singing by the children, led by the choir of St. Paul's and brief addresses by Bishop Funston, Bishop Leonard and Dean Eddie of St. Isrk's. In introducing the distinguished visitor from Boise, Bishop Leonard said bishops were common in Salt Lake; they were to be found on every street corner, but in Boise they had but two bishops altogether. Bishop Funston was one of them.

His Misisonary Work.

His Misisonary Work.

Bishop Funston spoke entertainingly to the children of his missionary work among the Indians and the good work being done by the Indian schools, both those kept up by the government and those supported by the church. He told of a visit made by him to old Chief Washakie and the anxiety of the old man to have all his children in the church before he died. He told much about his travels and work in the mountain countravels and work in the mountain coun-delivered on the general subject of missions.

The first of these addresses was by the Rev. James B. Eddie, the dean of St. Mark's. In missionary work he said three things were necessary—God's help, earnest work and money. The world is made up of workers and drones; there should be none but workers, and all should be working for God and humanity. Money comes out of our pockets like teeth out of our mouths when it should be considered a privilege and a pleasure to give. If a man has no desire to give he should shudder for his soul's welfare.

The Rev. Charles B. Perkins of Durango, Colo., was the next speaker, and he said that he was embarrassed to be sandwiched in between a bishop and a dean. He argued that it w s the duty of every person to know the facts about missions before they talk about them. A man cannot talk sense without facts. Men should study missions to see the work of God in the world. The records being made today are as inspired and wonderful as those found in the Bible. The whole world should be every man's parish and he should be every man's parish and he should be every man's parish and he should have no other. The study of missions is the only important study of today.

Bishop Leonard reminded the congrega-

There is letheargy in the church, be said, because people do not study the Bible. If the Bible were read with care and its principles appled, there would be a revolution in the world. Men would realize when they came to die that all want—it will not fall; it will conquer and the whole world will be brought to the foot of the cross.

Bishop Tuttle's work was eulogized. When he came to this territory there was nothing, now there were churches, hospitals, schools and missions springing up on all sides. Bishop Funston spoke of what Lewis and Clarke did for their government in saving all this territory for the flag of the United States. Christians should exhibit a Jike zeal and loyalty for the banner of Carist.

Bishop Leonard, in a few closing remarks, said that the besetting sin of the age was selfishness.

DR. PADEN'S ADDRESS.

Speaks to the Graduates of the Collegiate Institute.

Last evening, before a large assemblage of students and friends, Dr. Paden of the First Presbyterian church preached the baccalaureate of the Collegiate institute. The sermon was preceded by some beautiful selections from the choir, led by Professor Young. Dr. Paden chose for his text, Ec-clesiasts ix, 10: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might,"

and for his theme, "Making the Most of Life." He said: We often hear the expression, 'Oh, he ought to be making something of himself.' The gift of life is hardly a boon without the gift of wisdom. Alexander the Great said: 'Philip of Macedon gave me life, but Aristotle taught me how to make the most of life.'

"There are two or three simple rules that will help you. 1. Be assured that the days of schooling are necessary whatever you expect to make of your-self. The value of missionary work was illustrated in the life of David Livingstone. An old Scotch minister complained that his work was a failure; he had made but one convert in a year, and that a boy of 10. That boy was Livingstone. Bishop Leonard spoke to the children and showed them how important their work was in the aggregate, although it seemed so small.

Dean Eddie was introduced and spoke of the life and work of Livingstone and drew some useful lessons from it. The collection was given to Bishop Funston to aid him in his missionary work.
